

NEW-YORK DAILY TRIBUNE, THURSDAY, MARCH 2, 1871.

THE COURTS.

A DIVORCE CONSPIRACY CHARGED—A WIFE ABANDONED FOR A SEWING-MACHINE AND $600.

John Miller and George Gross were near neighbors, residing in Norfolk-st., in this city, and their families were on terms of intimacy. In August last Miller's wife, Elizabeth, went to Detroit, Mich., where she had relatives, and remained until the 26th of January, when she returned. At about the time of her leaving Mr. Gross disappeared. In September last, and while his wife was absent in the West, Miller commenced an action for divorce, alleging improper intimacy between his wife and Gross, and at the same time Mrs. Gross sued her husband for a divorce, alleging an intimacy with Mrs. Miller. The two suits were conducted by themselves, by their respective attorneys, by publication, and an order of reference to Charles A. Jackson was obtained from Judge Sutherland. The same witnesses were examined in both cases, and the testimony corroborated the opinions of the two plaintiffs with reference to the conduct of the parties. The court, however, in its decree of divorce, as given by Judge Sutherland in each case on the 28th of January, and on the 6th of February Mr. Miller and Mrs. Gross were married.

A motion was made yesterday before Judge Cardozo, to the effect that the marriage was null and void, as it was entered into in the face of the law. The court, however, held that the marriage was valid, and that there was no cause for divorce, and that the parties were entitled to the benefit of their contract. The court, however, did not grant the relief which the parties sought, and the crowded court-room adjourned.

The Clerk of all the Commissioners that meet at No. 92 Nassau-st., is George H. Pease. The following are some of the awards in connection with the Morning Star:

Edgar H. Pease and Richard O'Donnell.....$265
